

The Green Square

If President Putin needs to take a break from the international political scene, he has the opportunity to take off his shoes and socks and change the political scene into another fresher one. The ornamental green lawns inside the red, Russian castle in the Kremlin are sowed with Danish grass seed.

- About 15 years ago, the first Danish grass seed arrived in Russia, and today we are selling different grass seed varieties, both to the professional market as well as to consumers, says the manager of the DLF-TRIFOLIUM office in Moscow, Jonathan Sveinbjornsson.

But it is not only the elected officials who are enjoying the Danish grass. DLF-TRIFOLIUM is also the supplier of lawn seed to the soccer clubs Sparta Moscow and Dynamo Moscow.

- We were among the first suppliers on the Russian market and have achieved to become the synonym for high quality and credibility. The Russians have welcomed us with open arms, and the result is that we are the leading supplier of grass seed to the Russian market today, says division manager in DLF-TRIFOLIUM, Torben Beck.
